The author: I am a single US male who had experienced a crazy and stressful three years of psychiatry residency in Arizona.

A true story: These events happened to me but are presented as a novel.

Conflict: Dr. Maria struggles with love and work.

Some questions raised in the story: ?Do doctors first represent their patients, or do doctors primarily want money and power. Many US doctors are immigrants. A question: Does the medical system threaten to deport immigrant doctors if they don't perform immoral and illegal acts to protect the status quo: the money and power hungry medical system?

One answer: This is a true story; and so I changed the names so that that bad people wouldn't seek revenge.

The main character: Maria Mendoza M.D. is a psychiatry resident in training. Young, single Doctor Maria is a foreigner from Madrid, Spain.

Tucson, Arizona: Pima County Hospital was known as a "war zone." The hospital was overloaded with the worst cases. Psychiatry-resident Maria Mendoza, M. D. prepared for her emergency room on-call duty as if a matador. A patient - Jesus - attacked Dr. Mendoza in the ER. Jesus was soon pronounced dead on the Two-South psychiatry locked ward. After working thirty-four hours with no sleep, Dr. Mendoza (Maria) couldn't recall admitting Jesus to the hospital.

Dr. Maria was harassed by two jealous nurses. Maria was warned that Nurse Kelly had had an immigrant doctor deported. Maria received an anonymous phone call: "...you're going to be sent back to Spain, you bitch!" Maria feared she would be jailed and deported by the Immigration and Naturalization Service: the INS. Immigrant doctors were treated as slave labor.

Dr. Medici was Maria's boss. Dr. Medici downplayed Dr. Maria's suspicion that Nurse Kelly maliciously forged Jesus' hospital Admission Orders. The significance: Hours later, Jesus had died. Dr. Medici ordered Maria to belatedly sign Jesus' Admission Orders. If not, Dr. Medici would suspend Maria from the psychiatry residency. Maria refused to sign.

To Maria, Dr. Abyanker shined light on the crooked workings of the county hospital. Dr. Abyanker warned Maria that Dr. Rodriguez had disagreed with Nurse Kelly; and that Dr. Rodriguez was then detained by the INS and hadn't been heard from since.

Walking home from the hospital, Maria negotiated her way past Zap: a gun-toting teenage neighbor. Zap told Maria that a man had looked through her mail and into her house windows. Dr. Bert and Dr. Maria talked about resigning from the sick county hospital. Dr. Thomas told Maria that it was common practice for hospital staff to “cut a lot of corners.”

Maria learned that jealous Nurse Kelly controlled Dr. Medici, who was Maria’s supervisor. Dr. Medici threatened to fire Maria, unless she signed Jesus’ Admission Orders. Dr. Medici’s goal: to cover-up hospital responsibility for Jesus’ death. Maria refused to collude in the cover-up. Bert commented on Maria’s dark house. Maria said she was hiding from the police and the INS. Zap told Maria that a man had again looked in her mailbox and house windows. Maria treated teenage Zap as her little brother. At her home, Maria confronted a man who was looking through her mail. The police arrived, tackled Maria, and jailed her. Maria’s passport was confiscated by the judge to preclude her flight: going home to Spain. Dr. Medici suspended Maria’s hospital privileges for refusing to sign Jesus’ admission orders. Spanish Maria had a Green Card to work in the US. Maria’s suspension-unemployment made her an illegal immigrant. Zap’s superficial, but infected, gunshot wound couldn’t be treated by Maria because she was suspended from the hospital. Maria and her boyfriend Bert arranged for Zap to be illegally treated in the county ER: his gunshot wound was not reported to the police. Without explanation, Dr. Medici reinstated Maria’s hospital privileges. Maria instituted new Emergency Room procedures...
